NEW YORK -- The countdown to 600 is on for real,baylor basketball jersey, and Alex Rodriguez hopes it lasts

a lot shorter than the wait for No. 500.

Rodriguez on Thursday hit his 599th career homer, crushing an 0-2 pitch from Kansas City's Robinson Tejeda in the seventh inning.

The last time A-Rod was closing in on a round number, it took him 10 days and 29 at-bats to get from No. 499 to 500. He admitted Thursday he was "probably a little bit" pressing then but said he is now in a different place mentally.

"Night and day," Rodriguez said. "A lot has changed. I tell you, I'm enjoying the game more now than I ever have.

"Having the perspective I have now, after winning the world championship with this team, there's really no comparison [between] the team accomplishment and the personal accomplishment -- although they're great, but I have much better perspective now.

"Early in my career ... it was about accumulating numbers and hoping you got to the postseason. Now it's just about one goal."

New York Yankees fans who feared their hearts would be broken if favorite Derek Jeter and the club failed to come to agreement on a new contract have good reason to be much more optimistic as of Friday night.

Multiple media reports indicate that Jeter and the team have made "substantial or significant progress" on a new contract, a person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press under the promise of anonymity.

Meanwhile, the New York Daily News reported on its website Friday night that "the sides could agree to terms on a new contract as early as Friday night or Saturday," also citing "someone familiar with the talks."

"We certainly hope to get something done," Yankees GM Brian Cashman told the Daily News on Friday morning. "Both sides are working hard to try to find common ground. You have to go through the process."
